

NNS Holds Second Annual MLK Day Celebration

Newport News Shipbuilding celebrated Martin Luther King Jr.'s legacy with events for shipbuilders. The theme for NNS' second annual MLK Day commemoration was "The Color of Unity." First and second shift celebrations were held Jan. 12, and a third shift celebration took place on the morning of Jan. 16.

Guest speaker Edmond Hughes, vice president of Human Resources and Administration at Ingalls Shipbuilding, shared his personal story and talked about the progress made in his native Mississippi, across the United States and within Huntington Ingalls Industries.

"There are so many positive examples of how our country has changed over the years. We each play a role in making it a better place," he said. "I've been pleased with the energy HII has placed on the inclusion and diversity initiative. The fact that we are having this event today is a testament to that commitment."

NNS President Jennifer Boykin spoke about the importance of diversity to the nation and the shipyard. "The success we enjoy doesn't happen in places where people are isolated from one another based on their differences of ethnicity or class. Everything great and iconic about our country results from the understanding of and the respect for our differences," she said. "We must embrace and leverage our diverse backgrounds and ideas. When we do this, we build a future we can all believe in and feel part of. I believe we are on a promising path to a new culture and a different shipyard."

A choir of shipbuilders from both NNS and Ingalls Shipbuilding performed during the celebration. Renae Myles (E01) and Rochelle Robbins (O62) also addressed shipbuilders about the company's vision for the future.

NNS Recognizes Intellectual Property Awardees

Nineteen Newport News Shipbuilding employees were recognized for successful invention disclosures, non-provisional patent applications, utility patents and trade secret awards during the company's Intellectual Property Awards Luncheon on Dec. 19.

"It is amazing what we have been able to accomplish and all we continue to do,"

Don Hamadyk, director of Innovation and Engineering Solutions, told honorees. "You each represent the very best of the best in this company."

Award recipients disclosed three new and useful inventions that NNS decided to protect by filing non-provisional patent applications. The United States Patent and Trademark Office issued patents for four NNS inventions in 2017. In addition, one invention was approved for a trade secret award, a decision not to pursue a patent but to protect the invention as it continues development. These inventions will support current and future...

"Parking has been and continues to be a frustration for much of our workforce, and the company is committed to improving this quality-of-life issue," said Matt Needy, vice president of Operations. "As part of our Enabling Our Workforce NNSFORWARD Strategy, we established a tiger team devoted to parking. This employee-led team came up with some great ideas – some of which are being implemented now. In conjunction with Facilities, this team will continue to look at innovative ways to make immediate changes and also plan for long-term parking solutions. Adding the additional 500 spaces to Hidens is the first of many improvements that employees will see this year."

AROUND THE YARD

Corrective Action Request (CAR) Team Beats Stretch Goal

Newport News Shipbuilding delivered three ships to the U.S. Navy in May 2017. In the three months that followed, Quality Program Management (O06) identified nearly 130 outstanding corrective action requests (CARs) across programs. In response, the CAR team – which is responsible for working with NNS programs to help resolve and prevent recurrence of Navy-identified issues – established a stretch goal to reduce the backlog.

Dubbed “100 CARs in 100 days,” the effort required the CAR Team to gain Supervisor of Shipbuilding (SUPSHIP) approval to clear new and outstanding CARs to reduce the backlog to 100 in as many days, and was aggressive given the rates of CARs received and cleared.

The team was able to reduce the backlog to less than 100 by day 56, well ahead of the goal. The team celebrated the milestone with a cake. Additional issues were identified in the following weeks, bringing the number of outstanding CARs past 100 once again. However, the team continued working toward the goal, and on day 100, the number of open CARs was down to 93. The team is now evaluating goals for 2018.

In 2017, O06 changed its name and purpose, becoming Quality Problem Management, a department dedicated to supporting NNS with a comprehensive problem management solution. In addition to the CAR team, O06 also has teams tasked with leading material investigations and unplanned events.

The Dimensional Control (O68) team is pictured with Christmas stockings they stuffed for local children. The group thanked NNS leadership and fellow shipbuilders for supporting the effort.

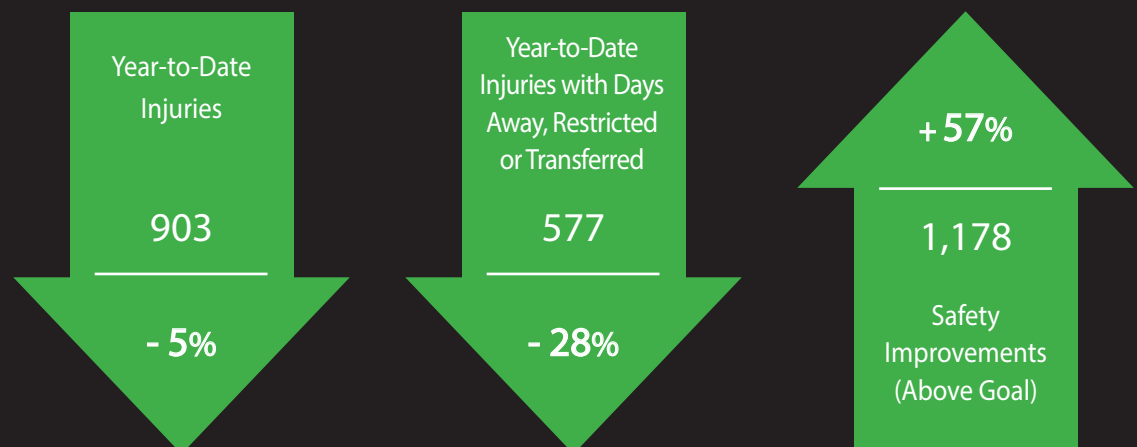

Dimensional Control Stuffs Stockings for Salvation Army

When the Safety, Engagement, and Communication Action (SECA) Committee for Dimensional Control (O68) asked for help stuffing 50 Christmas stockings for the Salvation Army, the response from shipbuilders in the department was overwhelming. In fact, the department exceeded its original goal and delivered more than 70 stockings.

The stockings were given to children 13 and younger in December. "We were pleased to spread happiness during the Christmas season, while supporting the Salvation Army’s goal of stuffing more than 3,000 stockings for children in the community," said Paula Young (O68).
