She's Underway: CVN 78 Departs for Sea Trials

Gerald R. Ford (CVN 78) departed Newport News Shipbuilding to embark on builder's sea trials Saturday, April 8. The trials represent the first time the carrier has gone underway using her own power. Builder's sea trials provide an opportunity for shipbuilders, Ford's crew and U.S. Navy personnel to test systems, components and compartments at sea. The trials will include high-speed runs and a demonstration of the carrier's other capabilities.

Named for the 38th President of the United States, CVN 78 is the first ship in the Ford-class and features an enhanced flight deck with increased aircraft sortie rates, improved weapons movement, a redesigned island, a new nuclear power plant, electromagnetic catapults and growth margin for future technologies and reduced manning.

USS Thresher. Never to be Forgotten

Monday, April 10, marks the 54th anniversary of the tragic sinking of the submarine USS Thresher. Although Thresher was not built by NNS, its somber anniversary is a time for all employees to reflect on the importance of quality and the consequences of a mistake. Shipbuilders are encouraged to take this time think about how to ensure the first-time quality of all NNS products.

Employee Ticket Information

Newport News Shipbuilding will christen Indiana (SSN 789) on Saturday, April 29. The Communications Division has a limited number of tickets to the event to distribute to employees. Two tickets will be given to employees who request tickets on a first-come, first-served basis. NNS employees interested in tickets should contact Yasmine Robinson (O29) at 380-2428. Employees selected to receive tickets will be notified the week of April 17 via email or by phone regarding ticket pickup dates.

A live webcast of the ceremony will also be available beginning at 11 a.m. Additional details will be available in Currents, on the NNS to Go app and on HII social media pages in the coming weeks.

Employees Participate in National Walking Day

On April 5, more than 100 shipbuilders gathered outside of The Apprentice School, in front of the Dorothy and in the North Yard to celebrate National Walking Day. In honor of the day, the company encouraged its employees to take time during their lunch break to get outside and walk.

Vice President of Quality Ron Murray kicked off the group walk outside of The Apprentice School, X18 Trades Director Gary Fuller kicked off the walk in front of the Dorothy, and CVN 79 Program Director Geoff Hummel lead employees along a walking path near Dry Dock 12. Many other company leaders also came out to show their support and participate in the lunchtime walk.

"Personally I'm an outdoors person, whether it's walking, running or hiking," said Murray. "The benefits of walking every day can clear your mind, and generally keep you fit."

giveaways. Representatives distributed bags to participants that included a bottled water, health related literature, and information about health offerings available to employees.

Software Development Analyst Keith Boettner (T55) participated in Wednesday's walk. "It was a beautiful day for a walk" he said. "I have few coworkers in my building that walk on a regular basis, which encourages me to do the same. Every time I make the decision to take time away from the work to get some fresh air and exercise, I always feel more energetic during the remainder of the day."

HII Showcases Innovation at Sea Air Space Expo

Just a few miles from the heart of Capitol Hill, Huntington Ingalls Industries made a strong impression as a leader in innovation at the annual Sea Air Space Expo (SAS), emphasizing initiatives that are laying the foundation for the company's future. Thousands of visitors, ranging from industry peers to top Navy leadership, visited the booth to see the HII's innovative efforts.

Outside the main exhibit hall, Newport News Shipbuilding debuted its new Digital Shipbuilding Mobile Experience (MX). Attendees were given an interactive tour showcasing how the 53-foot mobile trailer will be used for training and recruiting the next-generation shipbuilder. Inside, attendees experienced how shipbuilders will learn to use digital tools like Visual Work Instructions and Visual Build Management, concluding with an interactive HoloLens demonstration.

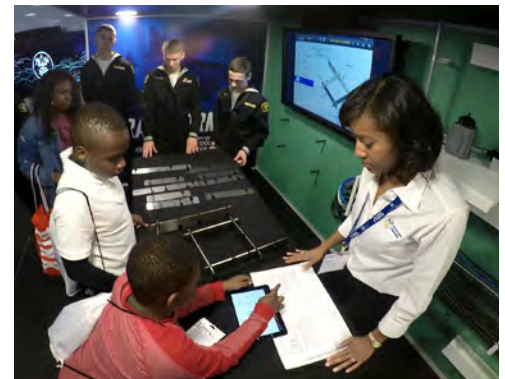

"I think the MX gives visitors an opportunity to really grasp what we're doing at the shipyard," said Sheet Metal Trades

Director Chandra McCulley-Hooker. "As the trailer comes back to NNS, I think we can do so much with it as a platform, for training our workforce and engaging them into the transformation."

In the main HII booth, NNS featured a large model of John F. Kennedy (CVN 79) and to-scale models of a Virginia-class and Columbia-class submarine. Guests were also given the opportunity to experience augmented reality and learn about additive manufacturing. The booth featured live 3-D printing in process and samples of 3-D printed metal parts – one of which weighs 50 pounds.

NNS also showcased its reality capture capabilities, otherwise known as laser scanning. Shipbuilders recently used laser scanning to perform the full ship check on USS George Washington (CVN 73) in preparation for its refueling and complex overhaul.

"We've implemented technology that is actually being used in our process and reducing cost in the overhaul program, as well as finding new uses in other programs," said Designer Chris Bryans, one of the presenters for Digital Reality Capture. "It's great to talk face to face with our customers and industry peers about the value that we're bringing."

NNS 5K: 10 Years and Running

Since 2007, Radiation Safety Analyst Franklin Sullivan (E85) has combined work with exercise, by walking with coworkers each day at lunch. The daily habit encouraged Sullivan to become an active runner in 2008 when he signed up for the first annual NNS 5K. Today, 10 years later, Sullivan runs five days a week and is currently signed up to participate in the 10th annual NNS 5K on May 20. Communications interviewed Sullivan to ask him why he runs and what advice he has to encourage others to start running.

Why do you run?

After my basketball career ended, running became a great way for me to remain physically active and I simply just enjoy it. Running is my favorite form of exercise.

What motivates you to exercise?

I try and think about how I will feel if I don't run, as opposed to how good I feel after I have.

What are your running goals?

Overall, I want to improve my health and like many, even though I played sports when I was younger, life gets busy and it's hard to make time to stay active. I want to continue to run in 5K and 8K races, but my long term goal is to get up to a half marathon and eventually full marathons.

What advice do you have for others?

My first piece of advice, is to find a great network of people to support you and who want to be active too. My co-workers in Department E85 have been instrumental for my success. My second piece of advice is to start with obtainable goals. Walking can lead to jogging, which will lead to running. But what is most important, is that you actually enjoy what you are doing.

Visit www.huntingtoningalls.com/5k to register. Participants who register by April 21 are guaranteed to receive a T-shirt.

Shipbuilders Steering the Way

Shipbuilders Darius Chatman (X11) and Richard Junk (X36) were presented with Level One Ethics Awards on Feb. 8 for their ethical behavior. Ray Bagley, vice president of Trades Operations, met with each of the shipbuilders to thank them for their actions.

Chatman was recognized for noticing that a contractor entered through the shipyard's gates by piggy-backing off him through the turnstile. Chatman immediately notified his management team who then notified Security. Within 15-30 minutes Security identified the contractor and resolved the situation.

Junk was recognized for notifying his foreman of small air bubbles in a puddle of water around the south rail of a crane that spans Dry Dock 10 and 11. When Facilities came out to evaluate the situation, they discovered that the water was coming from a broken pipe below the ground, which fed to nearby fire hydrants. If the problem had gone unnoticed, the situation could have affected firefighting capabilities in the area.

Want to nominate an employee for an On-the-Spot Ethics Award?

If so, visit the EEO, Ethics and Compliance website or contact Catrina Hagwood (O18) at 688-1907.

Annual Enrollment: April 24 - May 5

Annual enrollment is an opportunity for employees to enroll, update dependents and make changes to current elections. This year, all non-represented employees will be reset to "tobacco user" during Annual Enrollment. These employees must take action to change their tobacco use status. Non-tobacco users who do not change their status will pay the standard medical insurance rate beginning July 1, which is $660 more annually. For questions, visit www.hiibenefits.com or contact the Huntington Ingalls Benefits Center (HIBC) at 1-877-216-3222. Employees are invited to attend Annual Enrollment sessions throughout the shipyard to learn how you can reset your tobacco status and take advantage of new benefit offerings.

Shipbuilders Prepare for USS George Washington (CVN 73) Refueling and Complex Overhaul

USS George Washington (CVN 73) won't arrive at Newport News Shipbuilding for its mid-life Refueling and Complex Overhaul (RCOH) until August 2017, but shipbuilders are already busy planning for the four years of work to come. Although this is the company's sixth RCOH, this one will be a little different from her sister ships.

USS George Washington was stationed at Yokosuka Naval Base in Japan, and was there in 2011 when an earthquake struck off the coast of Honshu. As you may recall, the earthquake damaged the Fukushima Daiichi Nuclear Plant, resulting in the spread of contamination to the environment.

USS George Washington was located 150 miles from the nuclear plant and received very low level contamination to specific areas of the ship. Trained personnel have decontaminated accessible areas, some inaccessible areas, and replaced many of the components since the event. Navy crews have continued to live and work aboard the ship as normal.

The carrier arrived at Naval Station Norfolk in early 2016 where it's currently undergoing preparations for its RCOH, including minor clean-up to remove residual low level contamination from the 2011 Fukushima event. Once the ship arrives in Newport News, some components of the ship that have been previously inaccessible and closed off will be opened. Low levels of contamination may remain within some components that were operating at the time of the event, such as electrical motors, and these components will be handled appropriately by specifically trained workers.

"This ship has been continually monitored since the Fukushima event to ensure the safety of Navy sailors and shipyard workers," said Chris Miner, vice president of In-Service Aircraft Carrier Programs. "Any low level contamination in these inaccessible components pose no health risks and are similar to the levels of radiation found in the general environment, such as rocks and soil. Out of caution and to ensure the safety of our shipbuilders, we have established new working processes and procedures to monitor the equipment or systems that may have any remaining low level contamination, and to continually verify the conditions remain controlled."

A team of NNS shipbuilders has been trained to support the ongoing clean up efforts, and they are currently performing this work in Norfolk and will continue to do so in Newport News.

Additional Fukushima General Awareness Training will be published in Currents and discussed in "Take 5" crew talks in the coming weeks. Turn to the back of this insert to view the training.

Fukushima Fallout Control Areas

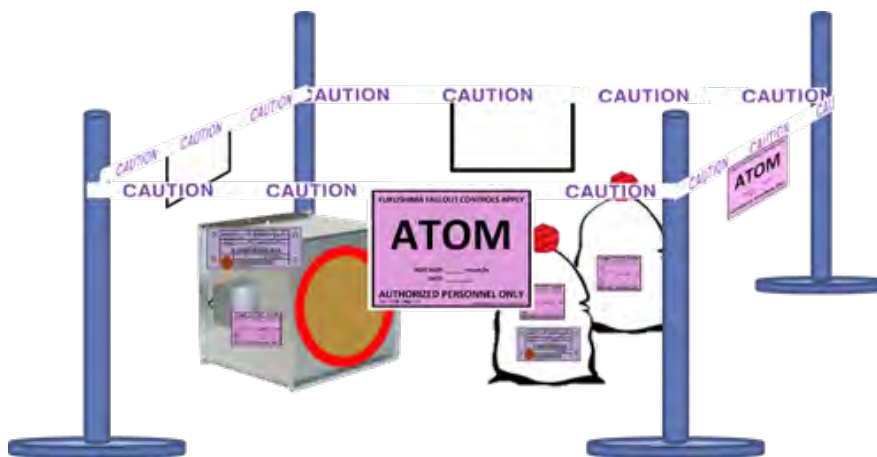

Part of the Fukushima Remediation Project is to make sure any remaining low level particles are removed. When work occurs on systems of the ship where radioactive particles from the Fukushima accident are thought to be present, the area will be controlled as a "Fukushima Fallout Control Area." Purple ATOM tags and white caution tape will be used to designate Fukushima Fallout related work and material storage areas. Do not enter into these areas.

Fallout Waste Areas

Any waste associated with fallout work will be stored in an area designated with a purple ATOM tag and white caution tape. Do not enter into these areas.

Material packaged as waste will be placed in clear plastic bags and sealed with red tape. A purple ATOM tag will be placed on the bag to identify it as "Fukushima Fallout Waste."

If fallout material is found outside of the designated waste areas, take the following actions:

1. Stay with the material (Do Not Handle)
2. Contact:
